Jim Dumps all cures for blues has tried found in this nation far and wide
He found a cure he thought was it; but now he's sorry that he hit---
Because she's tired of serving "FORCE", his wife's secured from him divorce.
The MAKIOS the thing for him; for it will make him

Meliff with apologies to "FORCE". SUNNY JIM!

C. A., Dayton, 1888-'91 ; Chief Draftsman, The Smith-Vaile Company, Dayton, 1891 ; Assistant in Drawing, 1892-'98 ; Assistant Professor of Drawing, 1898-1901 ; $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1901.

GEORGE W. FROST, Assistant in Mechanical Engineering

M. E., Ohio State University, 1900, Fellow in Mechanical Engineering, Ohio State University, 1900-'01 ; present position since 1901.

WILLIAM EDWARDS HENDERSON, Associate Professor of Chemistry

A. B., University of Wooster, 1891 ; M. A., 1894 ; Ph. D., Johns Hopkins University, 1897 ; Graduate Student, Johns Hopkins University, 1893-'97 ; Fellow in Chemistry, Johns Hopkins University, 1896-97 ; Professor of Natural Sciences, College of Emporia, Kansas, 1891-93 ; Professor of Chemistry, Ohio University, 1897-'99 ; $\Sigma X, \Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1901.

EMBURY ASBURY HITCHCOCK, Professor of Experimental Engineering

M. E., Cornell, 1890 ; Straight Line Engine Company, Syracuse, N. Y., 1889 ; Corliss Steam Engine Company, Providence, R. I., 1890-'93 ; Assistant in Mechanical Engineering, Ohio State University, 1893-'95 ; Assistant Professor of Mechanical Engineering in Charge of the Department, 1895-'96 ; Assistant Professor of Experimental Engineering, Ohio State University, 1896-'97 ; Associate Professor of Experimental Engineering, Ohio State University, 1897-1901 ; $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1901.

FREDERICK EDWARD KESTER, Assistant Professor of Physics

M. E. (in E. E.), Ohio State University, 1895 ; M. A., Cornell, 1899 ; Fellow and Assistant in Physics, Ohio State University, 1895-'97 ; Assistant in Physics, Ohio State University, 1897-'98 ; Held Scholarship in Physics, Cornell, 1898 ; Instructor in Physics, Ohio State University, 1899-01 ; $\Sigma A E, \Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1901.

WILLIAM ABNER KNIGHT, Assistant Professor of Machine Shop Practice

M. E., Ohio State University, 1900 ; thirteen years' practical experience in workshops ; Assistant in the Industrial Department and Foreman of the Machine Shops, 1893-'98 ; Assistant in Industrial Arts and Instructor in Machine Work, 1898-1900 ; Instructor in Machine Work, 1900-'01 ; $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since July, 1901.

HARRY WALDO KUHN, Assistant Professor of Mathematics

B. Sc., Ohio State University, 1897 ; Ph. D., Cornell University, 1901 ; Fellow and Assistant in Mathematics, Ohio State University, 1897-'98 ; Oliver Scholar in Mathematics at Cornell, 1898-'99 ; Erastus Brooks Fellow in Mathematics, 1899-1900 ; and Assistant in Mathematics, 1900-'01 ; present position since 1901.

THOMAS KENYON LEWIS, Instructor in Drawing

B. Sc., Ohio State University, 1894 ; Graduate Student, Ohio State University, 1894-'95 ; Summer of 1897 and Summer of 1898 at Cincinnati Art Academy, Assistant in Drawing, 1894-'01 ; present position since 1901.

HENRY CURWEN LORD, Professor of Astronomy and Director of the Emerson McMillen Observatory

B. Sc., University of Wisconsin, 1889. Assistant in Washburn Observatory, University of Wisconsin ; with Thompson-Huston Electric Company, 1889 ; Assistant in Mathematics and Astronomy, Ohio State University, 1891-'94 ; Director and Associate Professor of Astronomy, O. S. U., 1895-1900 ; Elected Fellow, Royal Astronomical Society, 1897 ; $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1900.

NATHANIEL WRIGHT LORD, Professor of Mineralogy and Metallurgy, Director of the School of Mines

E. M., Columbia, 1876 ; Assistant Engineer, Cincinnati, 1877 ; Engineer and Metallurgist Monte Grande Gold Mining Co., Nicaragua, 1878 ; Assistant School of Mines, O. S. U., 1879 ; Chemist Ohio Geological Survey, 1880-'88 ; Assistant Professor of Mining and Metallurgy, O. S. U., 1880-'87 ; Professor Mining and Metallurgy, O. S. U., 1887-'91 ; Professor Metallurgy and Mineralogy, O. S. U., 1896 ; Chemist State Board of Agriculture, 1881-'99 ; Chemist State Board of Health, 1896-'98 ; $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1896.

WILLIAM THOMAS MAGRUDER, Professor of Mechanical Engineering

M. E., Stevens Institute of Technology, 1881. Practical Experience in Machine Design and Practice, Taunton, Mass., 1881-'96. Student in Chemistry and Mathematics, etc., Johns Hopkins University, 1886-'87 ; Professor of Mechanical Engineering (practical and theoretical) Vanderbilt University, 1887-'96 ; $\Sigma \Xi$, B & H ; present position since July, 1896.

SILAS MARTIN, Instructor in Drawing

Studied Art with J. H. Witt, E. F. Andrews and Homier, Private Teacher in Art for twenty years ; Assistant in Drawing, 1899-'01 ; present position since 1901.

GEORGE WASHINGTON MCCOARD, Associate Professor of Mathematics

B. A., Bethany, West Virginia, 1873 ; M. A., Bethany, 1882 ; Principal of Oakdale Classical Normal Institute, Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, 1873-'74 ; Private Tutor in Cleveland, Ohio, 1874-'80 ; Principal of Public Schools, Irving Park, Chicago, 1880-'81 ; Teacher of Latin and Mathematics, Columbus High School, 1881-'82 ; Assistant in Mathematics and Latin, Ohio State University, 1882-'87 ; Assistant Professor of Mathematics, Ohio State University, 1887-'99 ; $\Phi K \Psi$, $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1899.

CHARLES WALTER MESLOH, Associate Professor of Germanic Languages and Literatures

A. B., Ohio State University, 1889 ; M. A., Ohio State University, 1895 ; Student in the University of Chicago, 1894 ; Student, University of Berlin, 1896-'97 ; Assistant in German, Ohio State University, 1889-'95 ; present position since 1895.

EDWARD ORTON, JR., Professor and Director of the Department of Clay-Working and Ceramics

Assistant on Ohio Geological Survey, 1882; Chemist for Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company, 1885-'86; Superintendent of Blast Furnace at New Straitsville, Ohio, 1887-'88; Superintendent of Victoria Furnace, Goshen Bridge, Va., 1888; Steel Worker, Homestead Steel Works, Homestead, Pa., 1889; Superintendent Ohio Paving Company's Factory, Columbus, Ohio, 1890-'92; Special Assistant on Clays, Ohio Geological Survey, 1892; Superintendent Acme Vitriified Brick Co., Louisville, Kentucky, 1893; Secretary American Ceramic Society, 1899; State Geologist of Ohio, 1899; $\Phi \Gamma \Delta$, $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since May, 1894.

CHARLES SMITH PROSSER, Professor of Geology

B. S., Cornell University, 1883; M. S., Cornell University, 1886; Fellow in Natural History, Cornell, 1884-'85; Instructor in Paleontology, Cornell University, 1885-'88; Assistant Paleontologist, U. S. Geological Survey, 1888-'92; Professor of Natural History, Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, 1892-'94; Assistant Geologist, U.S. Geological Survey, 1893-'94; Professor of Geology, Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., 1894-'99; Assistant Geologist, N. Y. Geological Survey, 1895-'99; Assistant Geologist, University Geological Survey of Kansas, 1896; Chief of Appalachian Division, Maryland Geological Survey since 1898; Assistant Geologist, Ohio Geological Survey and U. S. Geological Survey, 1900; Associate Professor of Historical Geology, Ohio State University, 1899-1901; $\Phi \Gamma \Delta$, $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1901.

S. E. RASOR, Assistant in Mathematics

B. Sc., Ohio State University, 1898; A. M., Ohio State University, 1902; Fellow in Mathematics, O. S. U., 1898-'99; Professor of Mathematics, Amity College, Iowa, 1899-1900; $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1901.

WILLIAM HENRY RENCK, Instructor in Pattern Making and Founding

Assistant in Industrial Arts and Foreman of the Carpenter and Pattern Shops, O. S. U., 1889; present position since 1900.

STILLMAN W. ROBINSON, Emeritus Professor of Mechanical Engineering

C. E., University of Michigan, 1863; D. Sc., Ohio State University, 1896; Assistant Engineer U. S. Lake Survey, 1863-'66; Instructor in Engineering, University of Michigan, 1866-'67; Assistant Professor Mining Engineering and Geodesy, University of Michigan, 1867-'70; Professor Mechanical Engineering and Physics, University of Illinois, 1870-'78; Professor Mechanical Engineering and Physics, Ohio State University, 1878-'81; Professor Mechanical Engineering, Ohio State University, 1881-'95. Resigned in 1895. Consulting Mechanical Engineer and Inventor for Wire Grip and McKay Shoe Machinery Companies, 1884-'98; Elected Emeritus Professor of Mechanical Engineering, Ohio State University, 1889. State Inspector of Railroads and Bridges, 1880-'84. Consulting Engineer Santa Fe R. R., 1887-'90. Consulting Engineer Lick Telescope and Mountings, 1887.

FRANK ARNOLD RAY, Professor of Mine Engineering

E. M., Ohio State University, 1887. Superintendent Building Construction, Elah Ter-ral & Co., 1887-'88; Assistant Mining Engineer, C. & H. C. & I. Co., 1888-'89; Chief Engineer C. & H. C. & I. Co., 1889-'92; Chief Engineer Congo Mining Co., 1892-'95;
Assistant Professor of Mine Engineering, O. S. U., 1895-'97; Associate Professor, 1897-
1900; $\Phi \Gamma \Delta$, $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1900.

FRANK EDWIN SANBORN, Professor and Director of the Department of Industrial Arts

S. B., in Mechanical Engineering, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1889. Assistant in Drawing, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1889-'90; Teacher in Manual
High School Department, Pratt Institute, 1890-91; Walker Special Instructor, Tufts College, 1891-'94; Instructor in Mechanical Department, Tufts College, 1894-'98; Director of the Department of Industrial Arts, O. S. U., 1898-1900; $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since September, 1900.

CHRISTOPHER ELIAS SHERMAN, Associate Professor of Civil Engineering

C. E., Ohio State University, 1894. Engaged in Civil Engineering in Ohio, Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina and Arizona for three years during college course; engaged in railroad, geological and governmental engineering from graduation until September, 1896; Engineer to Park Commission, Springfield, Ohio, and U. S. Assistant Engineer at Tampa, Florida, and Huntsville, Alabama, summer of 1898; U. S. Assistant Engineer on Roads and Bridges, Yellowstone National Park, summer of 1899 and 1900; Assistant in Civil Engineering, Ohio State University, 1896-'97; Assistant Professor of Civil Engineering, Ohio State University, 1897-1901; $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1901.

EDWARD EVERETT SOMMERMEIR, Instructor in Metallurgy and Mineralogy

G. Ph., Ohio State University, 1898; Student Laboratory Assistant in Chemistry, 1897-'98; Assistant in Metallurgy and Mineralogy, 1898-'01; $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1901.

KARL DALE SWARTZEL, Assistant Professor of Mathematics

B. Sc., Ohio State University, 1893; M. Sc., Ohio State University, 1894; Fellow and Assistant in Mathematics, Ohio State University, 1894-'95; Assistant in Mathematics,
Ohio State University, 1895-'99; $\Sigma \Lambda \Xi$, $\Sigma \Xi$; present position since 1899.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN THOMAS, Professor of Physics, and State Sealer of Weights and Measures

B. Sc., Ripon, 1874; M. Sc., Ripon, 1877; Ph. D., Stevens Institute, 1880. Instructor in Mathematics and Physics, Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota, 1876-'79; Professor of Physics, University of Missouri, 1880-'85; Member of the Board of Examiners at the International Electrical Exhibition at Philadelphia, 1884; Member of the Jury of Awards, Department of Electricity, at the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago,

History of Class of 1903

Now that the class of '03, the glorious and ever famous class of '03, has, with many struggles and by far more pleasures, ascended with firm and resolute steps the ladder of knowledge, and at last stands ready to start forth from dear Alma Mater's fostering walls, can there be anyone who asks the history of this class? Is there anyone (with all due allowances for the poor untutored Freshman) who is ignorant of the wonderful achievements during its four years of acknowledged masterdom and sway of such a remarkable class? Somebody says: "We will never forget it, but still we never tire of hearing its praises sung, and its wonderful feats repeated over and over again." Who ever tired of the stories of the great heroes of old, or to come closer home, of our own illustrious fathers just so all men now and forever until the end of time will enjoy recounting and listening to the deeds of the class of '03.

Just now I am carried back to that beautiful fall evening when we as Freshmen won the muchly coveted cane in the rush which every one admits was the finest ever seen on the campus. How every Freshman's heart (if he still had one) jumped for joy when he saw that bone of contention, in the form of a cane, with its streamers of scarlet and gray, being proudly waved over the Freshman goal. Little did we think that on the following year against a great horde of hardy Freshmen we would be able to hold the cane as Sophomores (a feat which is rarely ever accomplished by even the most sagacious of Sophomore classes). But we did it and did it well! Would that there had been more worlds to conquer in our Junior year, but you know that when you have reached the jolly Junior age you are launched into such a dizzy whirl of social gayeties that you have to relegate such matters to your successors, wishing to one and all the same success you have had.

Our Junior dances—for we gave three—were the most enjoyable affairs of the season. The Junior Prom. surpassed anything ever before given by less favored Junior classes and can never be duplicated by Junior classes to come, for we have had our ideas patented and intend to use them at our centennial celebration.

We reached the climax in this, our Senior year, when we from out our fertile brain evolved the plan for which professors will be forever grateful, at last have solved the problem which cost so many lives—that of having students on time to classes. Hereafter there will be no excuse for being late, for a clock, a real clock on University Hall, will stand forever unrelenting and its untiring vigilance will call back to prosaic life those taking advanced courses in campus work.

The greatest fact remains still to be told: we have broken all precedent, we have made ourselves famous, we have at last concluded to wear caps and gowns Commencement week. Did you ever hear of such an energetic class? We know that we are far ahead of our times, but hope that all the classes to come will follow our example.

These are only a few, a very few of the great achievements of our famous class; if all were to be told the space allotted to the Seniors would contain no pictures of our renowned individuals, for this would completely fill it and overflow, and crowd out all the other classes and the faculty, too, I fear.

History of the Junior Class

When writing this history of the Junior class it seemed most fitting to show that we had profited by our work under the distinguished professors of history at O. S. U., so the method which seems to be most popular has been used. Readers are kindly requested to read all references, as this is just the "skeleton of the history."

*"Patience and care have been required to overcome the difficulties attaching to a subject that was in an extraordinary sense a hidden one; and the author has constantly tried to observe those well known dicta of the historian; namely, to be content with the material discovered without making additions of her own, and to let her conclusions be defined by the facts rather than seek to cast these 'in the mould of her hypothesis.' "

"It is impossible for the author to make acknowledgment to all those who have contributed, directly and indirectly, to the promotion of her research. A liberal use of footnotes suffices to reduce her obligation in part only."

¹The first thing which we did in our Freshman year was to establish convocation. This is very important, as it shows the religious and thoughtful attitude of this promising class.

²Our next worthy deed was one which showed a true, generous spirit. We put a granite basin in the spring and placed it where even the "birds of the air and the beasts of the field" may drink of the clear water and avoid typhoid.

³The Freshman class hop was a marvel. We started out on our social life remarkably well.

Another thing we did which some of the members of the class seemed to consider too unselfish was to give the Sophomores the annual rush.

* See History of the Underground Railroad, by Prof. Siebert—Preface.

² See Hon. Patrick Kelly, Keeper of the Grounds. Policeman Woodruff—Authority on Dog-Killing.

³ See Lantern.

¹Our Sophomore year was marked by the noble effort which we put forth to have the Law Building placed in the horseshoe curve, even though forests were chopped down and houses moved.

Then another thing, we gave the only class informal ever given in the Normandie.

²The Junior year has been even better than the first two, although this seemed impossible. Having endured the University Cafe for two years, we abolished it this year in the interests of Pure Food.

³The Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, composed mainly of Juniors, prevailed upon the Advisory Board to engage a General Secretary to be our spiritual guide, and this year Miss Ford has proved a potent factor in the Gab Room.

⁴Having had such wonderful success with our informals everyone was waiting with bated breath to see what kind of a formal the Juniors would give, and they were more than satisfied. We have also had two informals this year, but everyone knows our record for dances, so we needn't describe them.

Our greatest advancement this year was in getting a lecture course. For two years we have heard the faculty discussing the need of a lecture course, and this year, having found out that our minds were⁵ "sufficiently mature to grasp what great men would say to us," we sat about to fill that need, and did it well.

The Juniors have accomplished many things, but these are enough to show that⁶ "if we with these poor facilities have achieved this great success, what should the coming Juniors be, with all the improved facilities which we are leaving them?"

History of the Sophomore Class

We have met the enemy and they are ours—two cane rushes, two football games, innumerable quizzes and divers mid-terms and finals. So the history of '05 would read if it were summed up in one sentence. An enemy might stop here with a bare statement of our most conspicuous achievements; a partisan might go on to describe the ease of our victories and our magnanimity to fallen foes, the brilliancy of our recitations and the uniform success of our cribbing; but the impartial historian must steer a middle course, avoiding truth as much as falsehood.

Feeling the need of giving the Freshmen a high ideal of college life, we returned to Columbus in September of this year after much persuasion from the faculty. The anxiety of our instructors during our absence is remarkable; it seems impossible for the University to exist without us. We rarely go home, even during the short vacations at Christmas and Easter, but a letter from the executive office follows relative to our return.

After winning the cane rush with ridiculous ease, we held a class meeting. Our class meetings are orderly affairs, so quiet that often eight or ten persons can be heard speaking at once. At this meeting, however, there was no debate, for all were agreed on a course of action. That night we held a formal parade, only evening dress being permitted. The costumes showed what variety even the conventional may assume and gave fresh proof of the originality and aesthetic taste of '05. All the gowns displayed were bewitching creations. The favorite pattern seemed to be a simple affair of white silk or some light-colored material, the trimming of cheap lace at the cuffs and the piping around the low-cut collar, making it well fitted to set off almost any type of hideousness.

Then came football. Our team, opening the season with an easy practice game against the Freshmen, ended it without a defeat. Even the 'Varsity did not lower our colors.

So we could continue to the end of the chapter, but we have been warned that the complete story of our triumphs would not be pleasant reading for the other classes; besides, the "Makio" is to be issued in only one volume. Therefore we pass from our selfish triumphs to our philanthropies.

Among the things for which the whole University has '05 to thank are: The reduction of required work in arts to fifteen hours; the securing of college credits for campus work and attendance at the various theaters; the practical application of the underground tube system of the transmission of canes, and numerous art treasures painted in red at conspicuous points over the campus. In addition, we have secured for the University a tower clock and shall shortly procure the abolition of drill and gym. work and the suspension from college of all men who have not credited with at least five cuts in drill.

We are proud of our uninterrupted success on the gym. floor, on the football field and in the class room. We are proud of the respect and admiration of our fellow classes. We are proud, most of all, of that humility, so unusual in Sophomores, which permits us to recognize the merit of other classes who have worked as hard for success as we and have failed only through lack of ability.

As the year draws to an end we can truthfully say that we have maintained the high standard which we set; that we have reached a point to which no former Sophomores dared aspire, and that now, the ideal of the Freshmen, the conquerors of the Juniors, the envy of the Seniors and the pride of the faculty, one's proudest boast at O. S. U. is, "I am a Sophomore." HISTORIAN '05.

NOTE—Anyone desiring to become an honorary member of this class may do so by depositing five dollars ($5.00) with the historian.

History of Freshman Class

It is fortunate that '06 is only one year old, for to write a longer history of so illustrious a class would be an almost impossible task; for we have surely shone as no other Freshmen ever did. We command respect for our members alone, and when our accomplishments are considered, we must admit with all modesty that we are quite the most remarkable class in college.

When we entered last fall, through respect to college traditions we made all the old mistakes and even some new and original ones to add to the old stock.

The cane rush, although a supposed defeat, was really a victory for us. The Sophomores showed their appreciation of our superiority by winning the rush by underhand, decidedly underground methods. How could the honorable Freshmen anticipate such trickery. That the victory was really ours was shown by the easy way in which we hurried the unwilling Sophs back with us to their own steps.

To be sure, we lost the Freshman-Sophomore football game, but this was from a purely philanthropic motive. We wanted to give their Historian something to write about.

Our skill and prowess is not merely in one line. What would the football and basketball and track teams, the dramatic and glee clubs be without us? The best players, the brightest stars are Freshmen.

We have the most persistent cutters, the hardest digs, the most complete flunkers and the highest merit men in college. In recitation our answers are the best, our mistakes the most ridiculous and our translations and pronunciations the most original.

Our classes in campus work are enthusiastically attended and the interest in the work is most satisfactory to all concerned.

We think of our instructors with reverence and respect; of the Seniors with admiration; of the Juniors with interest; but we positively refuse to think of the Sophomores at all.

Although it is not in the Historian's province to prophesy, yet she cannot help remarking on the beautiful and glorious future stretched out before us, and when '06 has won all honors, as it surely will, she begs leave to say, "I told you so."

Alcyone has added one more year to her efficient literary work. Not only has the work been of an exceptionally high character, but it has also been both meritorious and beneficial. The interest displayed along literary lines by the members of Alcyone has been greater than in previous years. In fact, the attendance of members and their willingness to take part on programs have made the meetings a source of much pleasure and profit.

Although taking a very active part in the literary work, the members have found time to attend to their social duties. Several receptions have been given to the ladies' literary societies, which have been very enjoyable affairs.

Through the untiring efforts of the social committee Alcyone has become the possessor of the best floor in the University. Other improvements have been made which add beauty to Alcyone's Hall.

In oratory and debate the ability of Alcyone men has always been recognized. Alcyone had two men on the first and three on the second debating teams and the alternate in the oratorical contest.

Years may come and years may go, but the fame of Alcyone will live forever.

With the close of the year's work Horton completes the twenty-eighth year of her usefulness in helping her members acquire that most valuable accomplishment, the art of public address. The benefit to be gained from active work in the society has at all times been realized by the members, and Horton looks back over her past with pride and satisfaction. Proficiency in the art of public speaking can be acquired only through constant practice, and this practice Horton aims to afford. Extempore speaking has always been a feature of the work of the society, and this, together with the debates, orations and essays, gives the members a training which can be secured nowhere else. The business meetings give excellent drill in parliamentary law, and the practice here afforded is most valuable.

That the work of the society has been along the proper lines is evinced by the constant interest the members have taken in the weekly meetings. The year has been productive of good results, and Horton has continued to furnish her full quota of men for the college literary and oratorical honors. The society looks back at her past with pride, and looks forward to a career of constantly increasing usefulness, both to her members and to the University.

Did you say that I had to write the Browning History for the Makio? My! My! But then I don't believe it will be such a task after all, for there is certainly plenty to say; the only difficulty will be to condense the account and yet have it sound well.

It is always better to do one's work, whether great or small, in a systematic way, and as this is a great work, I will keep that rule and take the Browning Inaugural as the starting point. How the halls of the fourth floor of the Main Building swarmed with young people, all eager to share in the dancing and have a good time. Many on the way home vowed that they would watch for the next Inaugural.

The regular meetings are held every Friday at 4 o'clock in Browning Hall. The programs are good and interesting—that almost goes without saying, for how could a crowd of such bright and intelligent girls have any other kind of programs? One feature somewhat out of the ordinary was the Parliamentary Drill. Of course I am not saying that any of the girls need this, but then—maybe some of the members profited by it. Browning is going to learn college songs, too, which shows that she is a most loyal society.

Well, the initiation. I almost forgot it, and I'll only mention the spread in connection with that event and let the initiates recall the rest.

The Browning Annual for 1903 I can say nothing about, but by the time this is published that great event will have taken place and we will let others sing the praises of Browning and help us on to another prosperous year such as this has been.

For many years Philomathean Literary Society has been a strong factor in the lives of the young women who come to the University. It was founded by six loyal college girls who saw that by means of pleasant comrades and good programs they would be better fitted for work.

Each year we have followed the precepts laid down by these founders and have made our programs instructive as well as entertaining. During the first part of this year we studied American authors, devoting an afternoon to each. The last half of the year our programs have been filled mostly with current events. One of our most delightful afternoons was spent in listening to papers appropriate to Arbor Day. One paper was on the preservation of American forests, a subject of importance to women, since it will probably be only through their efforts that this matter will be brought before legislative bodies. Extemporaneous speaking has not been neglected by us, and the girls have gone bravely through the trying ordeal, knowing that there is no better practice in giving one a ready command of ideas and speech.

This year has added quite a number of Freshmen, interested in literary work, to our roll call. In June we lose several of our members, who by that time will have finished their college course, but we know that they will always remember with pleasure the pleasant times they have had in our hall.

Since our last greeting we have passed our most successful year as a literary society. It has been one of thorough work and kindly feeling, one of enjoyment and progress. Our aim has been to become more efficient in literary and social culture, and in the usage of parliamentary law, and our programs have not all been of the kind that merely pleases, but many of them have been the result of hard thinking and diligent research.

We have reason to feel proud of our literary attainments, due to the earnest efforts of our officers and the unflagging interest of our members. At no time during the year have we been compelled to miss a meeting for want of a quorum. In a social way also we have advanced, and our annual reception has become one of the principal events of the college year.

We could say more, but—modesty forbids.

A cordial invitation is extended to all students and friends to visit us at our society hall, in Townshend Hall, where our meetings are held at the regular literary society hour on Friday evenings.

No literary society at O. S. U. has experienced the remarkable growth as has the youngest society, Athenaeon. With due credit to those who founded and labored for the society in the past, we still can say that this last year has been the most prosperous in the history of the organization. Its members have always been noticeable for their zeal for the development of their literary abilities and loyalty to the society, which has this one and only thing for its purpose. The programs for the last year have been well prepared, the average attendance has been higher than any preceding year. Such is the growth that Athenaeon is enjoying.

Regular attendance and diligence to duties will always bring success. The last year has seen the members of the society enter enthusiastically into all the literary contests held at O. S. U. So the reason is evident why now an Athenaeon man represented O. S. U. in the Inter-collegiate Oratorical Contest, why the society had a representative on the debating team, why Athenaeon entered so many contests and came out with so many honors.

In the debate with Hunter Literary Society, in the Inter-literary Oratorical Contest, in the Alcyon contest, Athenaeon's members have shown the splendid training available at that literary society. Yet her history is before her. Her customs and traditions are now being made. The future of the society holds in store for her members victories in literary contests; from their members shall come orators and debaters, and they shall add glory to Athenaeon and honor to O. S. U.

Since the day of its founding Hunter has been an ever enthusiastic, aspiring and achieving group of law students. Spurred on by a commendable zeal and loyalty, they have united their untiring efforts to make Hunter the best society in the University. Not content with the monotonous round of the ordinary literary society programs, many novel and attractive features have been added in the way of moot court trials, lectures by eminent men, stirring debates, etc. It is in these society meetings that the law men have the opportunity to show the stuff they are made of; where grace and ease of expression are acquired and where that self-control so useful and necessary to all public speakers, is made a second nature.

Since the day of its beginning Hunter has been struggling manfully along in dingy and uninviting surroundings. These are now nothing more than a fleeting memory; for Hunter has now the best equipped literary hall in the University. This room, located on the first floor of the beautiful new law building, is the Mecca of the literary lawyer. This room has been carpeted and furnished by the University. The historic Supreme Court bench, made sacred in the eyes of the lawyer by reason of the many learned judges of our state who have handed down from it so many profound decisions, adorns one side of the room. This inspiring memorial of justice and right is a constant reminder of the great mission of the lawyer—to secure equity between man and man. Under such favorable surroundings Hunter has taken on new vigor and strength. She has taken the initiative in intersociety contests and, by reason of a challenge sent out to sister societies, has given a new impetus to friendly rivalry in oratory and debate. With such a past, such a home and such well directed enthusiasm, Hunter's energetic young men, headed by capable leaders, will soon eclipse all post-attainments and rank the foremost literary society in O. S. U.

The Inter-Collegiate Y. W. C. A. Movement

The work of the Young Women's Christian Association, since its foundation in the State Normal of Illinois in 1872, has spread all over the world and an Association can be found in nearly every institution for higher learning where there are young women. The movement enrolls thousands of young women and is established in four hundred and twenty institutions in our own land.

Its object is to send out young women strong and true to stand for pure lives and Christian principles wherever their paths of life may lead. It proposes an all-round development. It was called into existence because of the need that was felt by college women for an organization which would bind together all young women in one common bond of sympathy and love.

The local Association is the unit. It is affiliated with the state organization and that in turn with the national, which in its turn is a part of the World's Association. International and state officers and committees determine the policy and supervise the general work of the Association.

The organization was effected in O. S. U. in the spring of 1900 and has had a rapid growth since that time. To facilitate the work of the Association, committees have charge of the different lines of work. Devotional meetings are held regularly on Tuesdays of each week; courses in Bible study, involving daily study, are carried on in four classes; also a weekly class in mission study. The monthly twilight concerts, which have been so popular through two seasons, are given under the auspices of the Association. The University calendar is likewise an enterprise that belongs to the Association.

This year for the first time the Association has had a General Secretary, Miss Minna F. Ford, an alumna of DePauw University, having been called to that position in October, 1902.

The Association was represented at the State Convention at Wooster, O., October 24-28, by fourteen delegates, at the National Convention at Wilkesbarre, Pa., by three delegates and expects to have four or five at the summer conference and training school for college young women at Lake Geneva, Wis., August 15-25, 1903.

The English Club of the Ohio State University was formed in February 1900. Since then it has held meetings regularly on the first and third Tuesday evenings of each month in the college year.

The object of the Club is the encouragement of interest in the English language and literature. At its meetings the nature of the topics discussed in papers and informal talks, varies according to the taste and interest of the members.

Membership in the Club is open to all professors and instructors in the English departments, and to all Junior, Senior and graduate students especially interested in English work.

During the year '02-'03 the English Club has been very prosperous. The meetings have been well attended and the programs have been varied and interesting.

Golf Club

Organized 1901

General Committee

Among the organizations making their first appearance in this year's Makio is the Golf Club. Golf was a much neglected game at O. S. U. until the fall of 1901. Then a few enthusiasts decided that in order to promote interest in the game it would be well to form a golf club. Accordingly a meeting was called, officers chosen and a field secured just back of the dormitories. Here a course of six holes averaging two hundred yards each was laid out and the game started.

At first the number of players was few and the course was not all that could be desired; but as the season advanced golf enthusiasm spread among both students and members of the faculty. It was realized that while we did not have a perfect course we had a convenient one on which an hour between classes could be economically spent; with this realization came more players. So that when the time for reorganization came this spring about fifty responded. No new officers were elected but a committee to take charge of the club's affairs was appointed.

Such is the brief history of the Golf Club's existence. It is now a well established part of our University sports and its future prospects are exceptionally bright. Already there is strong probability of a tournament for this year, and by next year, at the latest, a golf tournament will undoubtedly be one of the events of the college year.

The Fencing Club was organized in December, 1902. About twenty-five members, all that could be conveniently accommodated in the available quarters, were enrolled. Lessons were given every Friday afternoon by Mr. Fred H. Tibbetts, one of the most experienced and most expert fencing-masters in the state. Interest in the sport was never lagging and throughout the winter no club had a better attendance than this one. With the warm spring days, however, instructions were discontinued until next winter, when every indication points to increased interest and a larger club.

The O. S. U. Chemical Association was organized in 1893 by the students of the chemical and pharmaceutical departments. As the two departments grew with the growth of the University, there was found to be room for two societies, and the Pharmaceutical Association was established in 1900. Notwithstanding this division, the Chemical Association has not suffered, but has continued to grow in numbers and efficiency.

During the nine years since its organization, conditions have changed so that it was felt that the constitution of the society needed revision. Accordingly a new instrument was adopted in January, 1903, which made several important changes. The membership was thrown open to all persons interested in chemistry, insuring a more permanent organization by admitting the faculty to membership; the number of elections was changed to two; and various other changes were made, the net result of which has been growth and increased interest.

The meetings of the Association are held on the first Tuesday of each month, and consist of papers and discussions of chemical and allied subjects. But after all, information is not the primary object; we can get that from a book. Of equal or greater value is the cultivation of fellowship and common interest in our science, that spirit without which the science becomes a trade, and the chemist a day laborer.

This Association was organized at the beginning of the college year 1900. The membership is composed principally of the students in the College of Pharmacy.

The object of the Association is to further the educational and social interests of the students in the Department of Pharmacy. The meetings are held every Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock in the pharmacy lecture room, Chemical Hall. Papers on pharmaceutical subjects are read and discussed and quizzes on pharmacy, chemistry and allied subjects are conducted. About once a month the regular exercises are dispensed with and some prominent pharmacist of the city or state is invited to address the Association.

The president of the Association has the honor of wearing a beautiful jeweled pin which was presented to the Association by Professor Kauffman.

The Wheaton Ornithological Club was organized in 1896 by a number of students and instructors for the purpose of making a systematic study of bird life. The campus has been made a special object of study by the club and a list and a collection of campus birds have been made. The meetings of the club are held monthly in Biological Hall and all students and instructors interested in the work followed by the club are cordially invited to come to its meetings.

The club is an organization of instructors and special students in the Biological Sciences for the purpose of presentation of original investigations and reviews of current topics in this line. The meetings are held the first Monday evening in each month at 7:30 o'clock. At irregular intervals the club presents public lectures which are open to all and are of popular interest.

The object of the society is to familiarize the members with the handling and discussion of papers upon strictly technical lines and in technical language, to bring them in closer touch with the different branches of engineering and at the same time to afford the oratorical drill and facility in extempore speaking of a strictly literary society.

Meetings are held weekly and the program consists of papers on engineering topics and current events followed by a general discussion. From time to time lectures, often illustrated, are delivered by professors and others.

The entire student body always finds a cherry welcome and an opportunity to spend an interesting and profitable evening.

The American Institute of Electrical Engineers, which is a representative body of electrical engineers in this country, and has a membership of about two thousand, has recently taken upon itself to interest the students of the country in its work, and thereby to afford them an opportunity for keeping in touch with the most recent developments of their chosen branch of engineering. With this end in view, the establishment of branches of the institute at the principal universities of the country was proposed, and has been acted upon to the extent of the starting of about twelve of these branches. This movement comes home to the Ohio State University with a special force, as it was initiated and carried to a successful development by one of our own graduates, Mr. Charles F. Scott, who is now the President of the Institute.

The object of these branches is to read and discuss the papers presented at the regular meetings of the Institute, as well as to listen to original papers and discussion. To assist in this work, the Institute has been sending advanced copies of the papers to be read at its regular meetings, in such numbers that each member of the branch can have one of the copies. Recently, also, the Institute has established a class known as "Students of the American Institute." Such as take advantage of this provision and are enrolled as "Students of the Institute," have the privilege of attending the meetings of the Institute and receiving its monthly transactions.

The connection of the local branches with the national institution gives them a permanency and importance which it would be impossible for them to obtain in any other way, and there is every prospect for a most prosperous future for the society.

Makio

The other morning the careworn editor was opening the Makio box in the vain hope of finding something in it besides a bunch of hot ones about Booth & Meisse, when he was accosted by a young man, presumably a Freshman, since he wore his Cadet uniform buttoned up, in spite of the warm weather, who innocently inquired what that word written on the Makio box might be. The editor, in hopes of making a sale, set forth a glowing explanation and the Freshie, on learning that it was a place where a soak was taken at the profs, immediately promised to buy a copy. This little incident gave rise to the thought that perhaps some slight explanation of the name would not be amiss.

Makio is a Japanese word, pronounced with the broad sound—Márkio (we all mispronounce it, as might be expected). The translation "magic mirror," makes it a singularly appropriate name for a publication of its character. The word was the suggestion of our former Prof. Mendenhall, at that time just returned from teaching for several years in the Imperial University of Tokio, and Makio was the name given by the editor, Harwood R. Poole, to the first annual of the University in 1880, and with one or two exceptions has been used ever since.

The Jap characters on the cover are supposed to represent Makio, and were furnished by Mr. Ogihari, a Japanese student in this institution at the present time. The cover was designed by Mr. Will Ireland.

The fact that the mirror is magic gives it the property of showing people as others see them, but it is not infallible.

The Dove in the City

BY W. L. GRAVES

Across the city's crowding roofs is blown
 As though it dropped from daylight's specter moon,
 The soft-throat sobbing of a dove's dim croon
In slow, reiterated monotone.
I lift my head toward the mellow moan
 With urban sounds so strangely out of tune,
 And wonder while I hark its secret rune
From what green shade this wanderer has flown.

Upon my heart with strife and moil struck through,
 And hot with sight of drudging beasts and men,
This alien voice falls cool as twilight dew,
 A lure to reedy lake and shadowy glen.
"Be glad," it says, "beyond these smoky skies
Infinite beauty waits thine aching eyes."

An Old Tale

W. L. GRAVES

Down campus paths, with loitering feet
That time not to the moments fleet,
 The world all lost, a low-voiced pair
 Dream out the dream that knows no care
And hearken naught but youth's heart-beat.
This primrose way is ah, so sweet,
Yet here all subtlest perils meet,—
 For Love takes loiterers unaware
 Down campus paths.
Look how their glances touch and greet;
Behold his eyes her eyes entreat;
What boldest deed would he not dare
To smooth the brightness of her hair
 And Love's old litany repeat,
 Down campus paths!

Dorothy's Decision

IT was a wintry March day. The wind blew a perfect gale, against which pedestrians staggered along clutching grimly at their hats and dodging behind trees and posts to escape the fitful gusts that whirled up the side streets.

Dorothy Marting stood on the corner of X—avenue and B—street, gazed fixedly into a cloud of dust and meditated. Bare, gaunt trees waved their brown arms frantically at her and dry leaves danced wildly around her feet, as if to waken her from her reverie, but she heeded nothing and stood as if transfixed. Many passersby looked at her in wonder and then turned to look again in admiration, for she made a beautiful picture, a sort of symphony in brown. Strands of golden brown hair blew in a pretty tangle across her deep brown eyes, where a close observer might have discovered tears. The folds of her neatly tailored brown suit clung about her graceful figure. A tiny brown velvet hat and a huge sable muff of the same color completed the picture. No! not quite. The one diversion from this harmony of brown was a great bunch of purple violets, tucked in the front of her coat. Innocent enough these pretty flowers looked, but they were the cause of the tears in Dorothy's eyes.

"Oh, why did Tom send them just now," she said half aloud. "I had it all settled. Told Bernard that if I came to meet him tonight it would mean yes. He always comes home this way. May be here any minute, and now I'm all upset again. Dear, dear, oh dear, what can I do. Had my mind all made up this morning and it was all right and now—these violets. Dear little things—nice old Tom. Yes, very nice, but oh, so poor and—and—yes, very nice. Said he'd stop on his way up from the store and if I wore the violets it would mean yes. Dear little note that was. Tom writes nice notes. Poor Tom. He won't come till eight o'clock. Stays at the store late every night—bigger salary. Don't know why I put these on—dear little posies. Why, you're all over tears. I can't go to meet Bernard with Tom's violets on. No, it wouldn't be fair to Tom. Dear old Tom. Bernard's awfully wealthy; handsome, too, very handsome. Oh, yes, it's all settled. I can't keep them waiting any longer. Yes, very handsome. Poor Tom—I'm not good enough for him, though; no, not good enough for Tom. Wonder which way Bernard will come. B— street, I suppose, in his auto. I'll go on now. Won't he be pleased. Guess I'd better take the violets home first. Can't wear them. Yes, I'll just run back and then—yes, it's all settled—go to meet Bernard."

"Why, Tom! How did you get away so early? Why, yes, out for a walk. Why—wh—y, yes, I'm just going home. Yes, I have them on. Yes, Tom, dear Tom, it's all settled. Why, there's Bernard. How do you do. Yes, there in his auto. See? Come, Tom dear. Let's go and tell mother."

House-holders

My heart is a tavern for cupids,
Small lovelings that whimper and whine,
When I sternly refuse the wee stupids
To deed them this good inn of mine.

Each little god makes such a clutter
When I lend him my house for a while,
(All the others go off in a splutter!)
And his rules so tyrannic, I smile,

And I say to myself, "I'll turn this one
Out, too, with his friends in the rain."
But when the door's open, I kiss one
And call the whole flock in again.

The Songs that They Sing

LAWMAN.

I am a jolly, jolly Lawman, I.
The work in my department is a "cinch."
Pat Kelly never saw a law-school "b'y"
Who wasn't destined to adorn "th' binch."
No other man possesses such a brain.
No other man can hold so much "red-eye."
No other man can sing this old refrain
Half so appropriately as can I:

It's a merry, merry, merry, merry, merit,
Whatever kind of work that we may do.
We can booze all night long, if we but dare it
And still be sure the prof. will let us through.

ARTSMAN.

I am the kingly student of the Arts!
My work is spread o'er half a dozen floors.
I take a course in campus work and hearts
In Cupid's lovely kingdom out of doors.
Mayhap, some day my glad career will end,
Should Daniel never use on me his darts;
But, then, I have my pipe, my cherished friend,—
A friend made up of compensating parts.

It's passa, passa, passa, passa, pass.
It's no use for me to burn good midnight oil:
An Arts man never draws an "M," alas!
So I'd be a bloomin' fool if I should toil.

SPECIAL.

I'm a "special" in the subject known as "Math,"
Taught by "Bonny" up in University hall.
It's a subject without a single path
And full of unseen snares o'er which to fall.
Unless your bent is for analysis

Of signs that are indifferent to wrath,
Be sure that in your final synthesis
Your class card will declare that you're an "ath."

It's a chronic, chronic, chronic, conic, con,
A list of "C's" that drive me nearly wild.
They'll haunt me in my dreams when I am gone
And always fill my prayers with things not mild!

ENGINEER.

I am the engineer; and, as a rule,
My only hope is never ending work.
My profs. imagine that I am a mule;
And dream that I will ne'er a duty shirk.
In direst fear the term's close I await,
Especially that which always ends at yule;
For I know that I can have one only fate:
And that's to be invited to leave school.

It's flunka, flunka, flunka, flunka, flunk.
Go bid your Alma Mater sweet Good-bye.
The way they run things here is surely punk:
To graduate's as easy as to fly!

"Keyed Up"

The Younger:

"I'm not a pampered loafer, sir,
Who gambles in the mart;
Behold a locksmith, for I've made
Keys to your daughter's heart!"

The Elder:

"A locksmith, eh? I'm quite unhinged;
I didn't know this before;
I'm sore inclined to boot you ill—
Make a bolt for the door!"

D. S. A.

Sung by the Glee Club

(Tune :—Mister Dooley.)

Who is it comes up to the town with hayseed in his hair,
And wanders round the campus with a guileless country air?
Who tips his hat to all the profs, to chapel goes each day,
And thinks if once he cuts a class the dickens is to pay?

It is the Freshman, it is the Freshman,
His color is a lovely verdant green;
O Mister Freshman, you bloomin' Freshman,
You surely are the worst we've ever seen!

Who is it has the brassy nerve and thinks he owns the earth?
Who always estimates himself somewhat above his worth?
Who steals the straps from out the cars, who jumps his laundry bill,
Who always wears his uniform and dearly loves to drill?

It is the Sophomore, it is the Sophomore,
He's yellow where he isn't colored green;
O Mister Sophomore, you bloomin' Sophomore,
You surely are the worst we've ever seen!

Who thinks that life is not worth while outside the social swim?
Who rents a nice dress suit and dances till the stars are dim?
Who fills his card with campus work and takes his courses double,
Who falls in love and gets engaged, and has no end of trouble?

It is the Junior, it is the Junior,
The airs that he puts on would turn you green!
O Mister Junior, you bloomin' Junior,
You surely are the worst we've ever seen!

Who knows the college cannot run when he has gone away?
Who feels life's burdens pressing harder on him every day?
Who wonders how he'll pay his bills and still get out of town,
Who lets the girls persuade him he's a peach in cap and gown?

It is the Senior, it is the Senior,
We hope he'll leave a record good and clean;
O Mister Senior, you poor old Senior,
You surely are the worst we've ever seen!

Burton's Boomerang

GERTRUDE LEE JACKSON

"Yes," Burton was forced to admit to himself, "it would be decidedly unconventional." He gazed furtively across the aisle at the unconscious object of his reverie. "But when a fellow finds the girl for whom he has been looking all his life," he raged, "it's a pretty state of affairs, if he has to be restricted by idiotic conventions. But just how shall I go about it? Oh, hang her! She at least might have the decency to try to raise a window, or she might drop her book, or she might—hang her!"

Just then the girl glanced his way with a look of polite indifference that seemed utterly unaware of his presence. But the mischief was done. The fleeting glimpse that Burton caught of her eyes revealed that they were dark, deep and—dangerous. That decided him. He crossed the aisle and seated himself beside her.

"You seem lonely," he explained audaciously in reply to her quick look of interrogation.

"Appearances are sometimes what they seem," she replied laconically. "I have been wondering how long it would take you to do it."

Burton was decidedly surprised. His companion was evidently a young woman of unusual perspicacity. He managed, however, to conceal his amazement and to ask with proper innocence, "To do what?"

The look that the girl gave him was as studiously guileless as his own.

"Why, to condescend to forget your stupid paper, and to amuse me for the rest of the journey. How is Grace?"

A light dawned upon Burton. His cordial reception was explained. But the thought of making explanations on his own account did not occur to him, and he continued in his course of duplicity.

"Grace is extremely well," he replied unhesitatingly. "But who the deuce does she think I am?" he wondered.

The girl seemed relieved. "Then she was not seriously hurt? I am so glad. Tell me about it."

"Well, there's not much to tell. You know as much about it as I do," Burton asserted, with absolute veracity. The fact that he had made one truthful remark somewhat encouraged him.

"Oh! you are too modest," protested the girl. "The idea of doing a thing like that and then pretending that it is of no consequence. Tell me about it."

This was rather more than Burton had bargained for, "evidently a case of having greatness thrust upon one," he told himself. Aloud, he said:

"You flatter me. Modesty isn't in my make-up. Get Grace to tell you; she will give you a good account.

The girl shot an appreciative glance at him and then asked suddenly: "Do you remember that moonlight night on the river last summer?" The situation was fast growing desperate. So was Burton, but he replied unflinchingly, "How can you ask! Of course I do."

"You were unusually silly that night," asserted the girl severely. "You tried to kiss me."

"You must admit, though, that it was not my fault I did not succeed," Burton retorted quite unabashed. The girl looked straight into his eyes for an instant, then lowered hers quickly, as she asked archly, "Are you quite sure that you did not?"

Burton felt that he was getting into deep waters. The girl laughed gleefully at his obvious perplexity.

"Fie, fie sir! But then you are simply proving true the saying that a man always forgets the girl he did kiss and remembers the one he did not."

"It isn't too late yet," Burton insinuated. "If there is any doubt about it, I might"—he paused suggestively.

Contrary to his expectations, the girl failed to be at all impressed. "Yes, and then again you might not," she replied indifferently. "But that isn't the point at issue. Did you or did you not?"

Burton could have sworn that her eyes were dancing with laughter, but, when she raised them again their depths were calm and inscrutable. "No matter what I did," Burton warned. "There is no telling what I may do, if you tempt me sufficiently."

"Yes, but you won't," the girl retorted, giving him a benevolent smile that made him feel as if he were ten years old and had been caught stealing cookies. She glanced out of the window. "We must be nearing Springfield. I wonder where the porter is! I told him to be here when we reach it."

With difficulty Burton restrained his delight at learning that their destinations were the same. Later, he was glad that he had not mentioned the fact. "How do you know I won't?" he asked, reverting to their former theme.

"Won't what?" asked the girl, raising her eyes in surprise—then comprehending, "Oh!—because—but aren't you ashamed! What would Grace think of this?"

Here was an unforeseen contingency. But Burton's effrontery did not desert him. "Perhaps it might complicate matters a little, if she knew," he replied.

"It certainly would if you were my fiance," his companion declared. "I am glad you are not."

"I presume that Grace is, too," he replied, not yet realizing what she meant.

"Oh! I dare say!" she replied. "But she ought to be told how shamelessly you behave. It would serve you right, if she were to break your engagement."

Burton was seized with consternation. The sudden knowledge that he was an engaged man completely bewildered him, and without thinking of consequences, he exclaimed, "I wish she would!"

A sudden scornful sparkle in the girl's eyes made him appreciate what he had said. "You need not try to explain," she began, cutting short his attempt to retrieve himself. "Grace certainly ought to know. But I shall not tell her, if you do not."

And again her eyes mystified him. He was growing wild. "A nice mess you have got that other man into, he told himself. "He ought to kill you."

But the girl interrupted his soliloquy. "Of course, there may be—"

"Extenuating circumstances," interrupted Burton in turn. "There certainly are, if you only knew."

She laughed. "Oh! but I do," she cried. "I know far more than you think."

This was not exactly reassuring, and there is no telling what blunder Burton might have made next, had not the porter appeared at that instant and informed the young woman that they were almost in Springfield.

"I presume you will come back to the ball tomorrow evening?" she asked Burton as she rose to go.

"Yes, indeed," he replied, "and I want particularly to see you. May I have a dance?"

"You are improving," she said. "You usually take two."

"Then this time I shall take three," he retorted. "What name shall I write on your program?"

This last inane question, in a vain hope that she might be induced to disclose whom she thought him to be. But already the train had stopped, and the porter had started toward the door with her suit-case. She followed him and, just as she was leaving the car, turned and answered Burton in a way that set him thinking. "Ananias would be highly appropriate," she said.

And the more he reflected upon the matter, the more convinced he became that he must find the "Grace" in question, and explain the situation to her, before the fair stranger should have a chance to do so. "She said she wouldn't tell," he said, "but that is nothing. You can always depend upon a girl to do what she says she will not. Still, how am I to know which Grace it is? There may be a hundred in town." But, when he reached his home, he found awaiting him a note, which promised to throw some light on the matter. It was from his cousin, and ran:

"I am expecting you for dinner tonight, so don't fail me. My friend, Leigh Beverly, of whom you have heard so much, is here and I have invited a few people to meet her. I am depending on you, so be sure to come.—Nell."

"P. S.—Grace Morgan is just back, and she will be here. I thought that might interest you.—N."

"Oh, heavens!" he groaned. "Yes, I should say it does! Grace Morgan of all people! She never can understand. But it's safe to wait until evening."

When he entered his cousin's drawing-room a few hours later, he made a straight line for Grace Morgan. "I really owe you an apology," he said, after they had greeted each other, and then he proceeded to explain. The vacant look on her fair round face was truly maddening. Even after a second explanation she seemed not to understand.

"Why, Geoffrey Burton! Whatever are you talking about? I am not engaged to you—and," a sudden spasm of discernment seized her, "It must be some other Grace."

The truth of her assertion was obvious. Burton had wild visions of making a house to house canvass of the city in search of the right Grace, and grew savage accordingly.

"I want you to take Leigh in to dinner," his cousin said, as he sat there cursing womankind in general, and Grace Morgan in particular. "It's just like her! The stupid thing! Why couldn't she—What did you say, Nell? Oh, yes, of course. I can't express my delight. She will talk Ruskin to me, I suppose. Where is she?"

Eleanor Randolph laughed good-humoredly. "You are evidently out of sorts, Geoffrey mine. But wait until you see her. She hasn't come down yet."

Burton clutched her arm wildly, as a dazzling vision of red and white appeared in the doorway. "Who in the—who is she?" he asked, recognizing his traveling companion.

"Leigh," replied Mrs. Randolph simply.

"I have met Miss Beverly before, I believe," he said as his cousin introduced them.

Miss Beverly's eyes expressed first surprise then amusement. "Under different conditions, though," she assented, flashing a laughing glance at Burton.

For the first time in his life he was at a loss for a reply. "I must—" he stammered, but Leigh interrupted:

"Not until the Assembly Ball, unless you prefer—"

"Oh, I do!" he replied. "I must confess at once," and he did.

Leigh did not seem at all vexed, but on the contrary, appeared greatly amused. "I am sorry I caused you such a bad quarter of an hour, Mr. Burton," she laughed. "But I, too, have a confession to make. If I were you, I wouldn't search longer for Grace. I doubt if you will find her. Because she—well, I was pretending, too.”

Burton’s face was a study. “Then,” he cried delightedly, “you were bluffing.”

“Yes,” acquiesced Leigh. “I knew that I could say anything I liked and that you would follow my lead, for, of course, you wouldn’t suspect me of such an impropriety. And I must say that you rose to the occasion nobly.”

“Now I see why you called me Ananias, Miss Sapphira,” retorted Burton.

“Oh! flirtation is a game at which two can play,” declared Miss Beverly, who certainly was an authority on the subject.

The Fisher Maid

Down by the rumbling, tumbling sea
She goes, nor heeds the breakers’ roar.
And much do I delight to see
Her wield th’ unwieldy oar.

Her hair blows free, and wilfully
It plays across her arching brow.
And she doth tempt, it seems to me,
The roaring chasm now.

For firm she stands, and in her hands
The tiller answers to her will.
The sail obeys her stern commands,
The gale blows louder still.

Swiftly we send before the wind,
Swift as the howling wind we fly,
Leaving the sea-gulls far behind,
The fisher maid and I.

Clear is her eye as the gulls’ that fly,
Strong is her grasp and firm and true;
Trained and schooled in the Varsity,
She is from O. S. U.

She is a fisher maid in truth,
Skillfully plying her guileless art,
For as we sail the deep, forsooth,
She hath ensnared my heart.

SHAKESPEARE.

TRUE story of a happening about college is always of more than passing interest. Here is one on Professor Bownocker, told by an eyewitness who, however, refuses to affix his name. Have you ever seen Prof. Bownocker in his silk hat? No? Well, you've missed it. I was coming north in the "owl" one night last winter, when, who should pile on but the good Professor Bownocker, all dignity, with a back as stiff as his four in color, and a smile like "Casey's at the bat." He took a seat opposite two of Mayor Hinkle's ardent supporters, who had, as is according to their faith, been amusing themselves by painting the town a brilliant carmine. A cigarette had a precarious foothold in the mouth of each and both heads had nestled far up in under the friendly brim of its alpine.

They did not perceive his nibs as with the customary formalities he tastily hitched up his shank cloth preparatory to raising the thermal units in the seat beneath. A sudden jolt of the car, however, brought one of the blossoms to his senses, who, after a prolonged stare at the veteran head-piece of the great geologist, during which intervals his lamps flickered from red slits to the size of the proverbial saucers, he gave his pal a sharp crack on his acromion process and startled the passengers by exclaiming, in an amused though rather uncertain voice, loud enough, however, to be heard in the trailer, "Say, Mike, pike de hat on de guinea across de car."

ANY complaints having been registered by the lawless element about the University, apropos the compulsory wearing of quarter-sleeve jerseys on the Gymnasium floor, the MAKIO wishes to endorse the position taken by the eminent Doctor Linhart in this regard, for the following reasons:

First—It is to the interests of this democratic commonwealth that one man should look just as bad as another.

Secondly—Quarter-sleeve jerseys tend to prevent exertion, and this obviates the necessity of running up frequent laundry bills.

Thirdly—Any institution which promotes modesty and uplifts the moral status of the University should receive our most loyal support.

Fourthly—As an aid to personal appearance it is a boon to the slim person, giving the smallest shoulders the appearance of health and strength.

Fifthly—To the vain-glorious it prevents the arrogant, immodest display of a good pair of shoulders, and is a sure preventative of self-pride, as any one who cares aught for his personal appearance will not be seen in quarter sleeves.

Sixthly—It places O. S. U. far in advance of other institutions of our land, and is a potent factor in gaining for us an enviable reputation for up-to-date-ness. As has been the matter of common remark, every University team which has ever visited us has appeared in the old style. Barberous, unseemly although thoroughly good looking jersey without sleeves.

Finally—Why buy a fifty-cent sleeve jersey when you can get a quarter-sleeve?

“Will you play in tomorrow’s game tomorrow, Mr. Newman?” she asked admiringly.

“No, I guess not,” he returned. “You see, we have a new set of signals and I’m not thoroughly familiar with ’em. I’ll be in all the rest of the games this season, though.”

“Oh, Mr. Newman, what a glorious thing it is to be an athlete.”

Miesse—"Say, Corkery, I'm going to run for Class President and I want your support."

Corkery—"Naw, you're a frat man."

Miesse—"Oh, no I 'aint."

Corkery (pointing at Miesse's Lambda Nu pin)—"Well, what's that?"

Miesse—"Oh, that's nothing; that's just the pin of our eating club."

What Pin Did He Mean?

He saw all the other Freshmen wearing them, so he went down to Auld's to get one, too.

"Is there something I can do you for—I mean—I can do for you?" asked the silver-throated young lady behind the counter.

The Freshman finally recovered his dumb look and said: "Say, Mrs. Auld, I want to get one of them Freshman class pins."

"What kind of pins are they?" as she pushed her hair back over her ear and fixed her belt pin in the back.

"Why, one like all the Freshmen are wearing. They are little white shields, with gold stars on them," replied the Freshman.

And, as he boarded a Neil avenue car on his way home to the "North Dorm," he wondered why every one in Auld's smiled so loudly.

The unprecedented success of the Law Department has long been a subject of comment, but more especially so since the new building has been occupied. And yet, had it not been for Judge Hunter's keen sagacity, this happy state of affairs might not have existed. He it was who insisted that the transfer of the Law Library from Orton Hall to Paige Hall should take place under none but the most auspicious conditions. He it was who prevented the moving from beginning on Friday of the Thanksgiving recess. He it was who refused to be baffled by derision and obstinacy. He, who on midnight of Wednesday aroused Mr. Kelly from slumber and called upon him to help save the college. Armed only with a push-cart, and accompanied only by Mr. Kelly, the venerable Dean braved the terrors of the campus, and at "dreary midnight's darkest hour" transferred a load of manuscripts and magazines from Orton Hall to Paige Hall, thus averting the calamities that would have inevitably befallen, had the work been begun on ill-omened Friday. All praise and honor are due him, and when coming generations shall have reaped the benefits of his action, let his name not be forgotten! And when strangers behold and admire our beautiful Law Building, let us tell them, "Had it not been for Judge Hunter, yon fair structure might have been in ruins."

There is a Phi Delt named Bonnet,
Of whom one might write a sonnet;
But one hasn't the grace,

This is No Fable

Once upon a Time the great O. S. U. state College university foot Ball team migrated to an Place of ann Arbor for to Play an game of foot Ball. The Wise and Great Sages and Profets Delivered Themselves that it Would be an Cinch that they would Triumph over the Ungodly. So a great Host numbering many Children of this Faith took unto themselves much Moneys and fine Linen and many Ribbons and Banners of Scarlet with Gray Trimmings and Tapestries, which they were to Flaunt in the Eyes of their Enemies and of all Them that Hated and Despitefully used them for a Mock and Laughing stock to the Land, and that they might be Properly and Effectively Guided in the witnessing of the Slaughter, the Rooters and Rootereesses took along with them a Very handsome Boy to Guide them. (It may here be Added, that he didn't Guide them but that they Guyed him.) The Name of the Bright, Spiritful boy was Spurrier, and he was of Creation Unique. He was Clothed in Raiment of the color of the Nutmeg with Trimmings of Lettuce and Hard Boiled Eggs. He in his hand Carried a Large Instrument, which in the Terminology of the Ancient Greeks is called Megaphone, and which is being Interpreted, to make, or the making of, a Noise. Furthermore he Wore a Confident Smile. With Bated Breath the Rooters and Rootereesses awaited the signal from their Leather Lunged King: "Come on now, fellows, altogether—Number Seven—ANAREBO—!!!!. But the Breath of the Rooters and Rootereesses was Still Bated. Again the Disheartened King muttering Consolations to Himself, Belched forth once more the Slogan—ANAREBO!! Verily the way of the Mighty is Studded with Nails. Rumbling down from the Bleachers came a Murmur of Many Tongues, but all with a Singular Similitude in its Sanguinity and sounding Gastly to the Bright, Handsome, Spiritful, Boy out in the Still, Cold Air. "Shut up, you Crab." !!! Then All was Dark. There is No Moral.

Fatty Fay's Walk

'Tis said that Fatty Fay
Went to Westerville one day—
What's more, he went to see a girl.
Fatty has been heard to say
That this journey didn't pay,
His troubles got his hair all out of curl.

The hour was growing late
When he left her at the gate,
And he hurried down the street for the last car.
But his rush was all in vain,
The car he could not gain,
And he scarcely had the price of a cigar.

Most horrible the plight!!!
'Twas the middle of the night,
And Columbus was some fourteen miles away.
This very luckless wight,
Since his pocket-book was light,
Had not the wherewith hotel bills to pay.

As each foot sank in the mud,
With a squishing slippery thud,
We'll not record the language that he spake.
But he vowed if he got home
He never more would roam,
And now he swears love's nothing but a fake.

Joseph Joineth the Phitaps

A certain man of the tribe of Hunter, of the people of the Oshuites, went up daily into the temple, to worship and to sacrifice unto his god Blackstone.

2. And the man's name was Joseph.

3. And certain of his tribe saw him that he was fair to look upon, for his countenance was like unto the sun, and his voice was as the sound of a tinkling cymbal.

4. And his brethren spake unto one another, saying, Behold, it is well. He looketh easy unto us.

5. Come now, therefore, and let us make unto ourselves a covenant, and let us call ourselves Phitaps.

6. And we will send unto him and bid him that he may be one of us.

7. And he will surely bite.

8. Thus shall we welcome him to the land of the Hunterites, and shall make for ourselves much sport.

9. And they did the thing which they had said, and sent unto Joseph a messenger, saying, Come thou, and be one of us.

10. And it came to pass when Joseph heard the words of the messenger which he spake unto him, that the Phitaps found favor in his sight.

11. And he delivered himself into their hands. Yea, into the power of the wicked gave he himself. Whereat the scoffers laughed.

12. Now when the appointed day was come, behold his brethren laid hands upon Joseph, and put upon him raiment of strange and divers kinds.

13. And set him upon a high stone, and commanded him, saying,

14. Thus shalt thou stand, O Joseph, and enlighten the word with the glory of thy countenance.

15. And all the Oshuites wondered greatly among themselves, what manner of man this could be,

16. For Joseph was a goodly person, and well favored.

17. And when he had stood for a long time upon the rock, his brethren brought him down.

18. And it was time to go up into the temple to worship.

19. But they said unto him, Today mayst thou not worship. Verily we have other use for thee.

20. And the priest in the temple was next.

21. And Joseph worshipped not upon that day.

22. Now, behold, when Joseph came down out of the temple, they sent him into the place where the women dwelt;

23. And they commanded him, saying, So shalt thou say to the keeper of the door,

24. Behold, I am sent of my brethren, for the thing is called the Gabber,
25. For without the Gabber we may not secure you into our midst.
26. And even as he had been commanded, Joseph did.
27. And, behold, the Fair-isees, when Joseph came unto them, opened their mouths and laughed.
28. Yea, like unto the voices of demons was the sound of the cachimnations.
29. And they sent him away in haste.
30. Yet Joseph grew not wise.
31. And when he was returned unto his brethren, they took him into an upper room in the temple.
32. Into the holy of holies took they him, even into the place where the tabernacle is kept.
33. And the things which they did unto him may not be told.
34. And when the end was come, behold, Joseph was a Phitap, even as his brethren.
35. And the glory of his face shone round about,
36. For he was not yet wise.
37. And Joseph dwelt many happy years in the land, and waxed exceeding fat.
38. For he never got next.
39. And even the small children pointed to Joseph and said proudly, "Thou are the Cheese of Cheeses."

Bonny and High Church

Not long ago Bonny accepted Prof. Elder's invitation to attend church with him at The Good Shepherd. Elder led the way to the pew, entered and dropped down on his knees. Bonny followed closely but a stained glass chembrin caught his eye, and he failed to see the other prof's maneuver and trod blithely on his legs, much to that unfortunate man's mortification, both in flesh and spirit. A hoarse whisper was heard: "What the devil did you get down on your knees for?" And then all was still. Here endeth the first lesson.

Which ?

We are told in the land of the Chinaman's birth,
Where foreigners flock from all over the earth,
That the Coolie has classified all those who land,
From the "Melican" tall to the Indian tanned,
On the basis of motives which have brought them there,
Whether health, or mere pleasure, or business care.
By the man who has "come to buy cargo" is meant,
The one who is purely on business intent.
The one who has merely "come to look and see,"
Is there since it happens the custom to be.
And the man who, the Coolie says "'spects to die soon,"
Has come for his health, of course a great boon.
Now the classification used by the Chinees,
Applied to our own college students may be,
If the Coolie in O. S. U. circles should move,
Would he not of the following list soon approve?

"COME TO BUY CARGO."

Elizabeth Adams, Catherine Andrews, Alvin Bonnet, Cockley, Louise Colton, Davis, Esther Eaton, Ruth Grant, Iams, Grace Jones, Gordon Kindel, Louise Mark, McClelland, Nell Sheets, Martha Sproat.

"COME TO LOOK AND SEE."

Adair, Mabel Baldwin, Lucile Curry, Ethel Brice, Fanny Mitzenberg, Leo Lindenberg, Mary Leonard, Egbert Mack, Roston Medberry, Maud McAlpine, Mary McDermith, Nagel, Caroline Norton, Rita Randall, Florence Gratigny, Bertha Turner, Betty Thompson, Grace Keating.

"'SPECT TO DIE SOON."

William Andrews, Ward Chaffee, DeLay, Alice Elliott, Mary Janeway, Babe Keating, Cloyd Lott, Miesse, Oblinger and Florence Sackett, George Parsons, Ralph Rarey, Gladys Sapp, Kit Vogel, Bert Stewart, Stanley Winger, Jim Fulton.

At a baseball conference Hagenbuch remark that a pennant or loving cup would make an appropriate prize and that it could be passed around from year to year. At this point Willie Nachtrieb butted in with the following: "I tell you fellows that it would be a considerable(?) sight more appropriate to pass around a dutch lunch from year to year." And here the conference adjourned to Tim's.

There is a Professor named Randall,
 Who knows how a toast best to handle;
 In class-room this wit
 Makes an hour with him flit,
 Side o' him Ezra Kendall's a candle.

In the Chemical Laboratory

(Scene: Mr. Wilkinson has just broken a whole nest of beakers, and the landscape is dark-blue. Enter Prof. Foulk.)

Mr. W.—??? I——!!—! I—!—!!! I I—???!!!

Prof. F.—“Whenever you wish to express this kind of sentiment, please use the hood.”

The following was contributed by Stan. Winger when asked to fill out a Senior blank for the Makio:

I cannot swell my chest with pride
And reticently pretend to hide
Anything that's labeled "honors,"
For at me every prof. has taken a crack
And I certainly would be a "cracker-jack,"
If I had collected "honor,"
So simply print my fameless name
And I go back from where I came,
To home and mother.

Davies—"Now, some people are always looking at mirrors. I don't see why. I never saw anything attractive in a mirror yet."

Billy Graves (in Rhetoric 8, when "Tubby" fails to appear)—"Well, Mr. DeLay has delayed so permanently that we shall have to omit his paper."

Joe Taylor—"Now, what did she do when he kissed her? Well, she didn't scream. That was good manners, anyway."

Batchelder—"There are only six fluent French conversationalists in the United States. I am glad to say I know the other five."

Hagerty—"I'd like to mintion in this conniction."

Major—"Now, Professor Landacre sees a hundred things walking between the University and King avenue."

Mr. Phil Thomas (at a dance)—"Miss Weber, don't you think Miss Grant is the most beautiful girl here? Her starry eyes—"

Miss Welling—"I do wish you girls would stop teasing me about Mister Shepard, because it's only a case of Platonic friendship. I don't care for myself, but it would make him so angry, for he thinks of me only as a friend."

Batchelder (after handing back some examination papers)—"Now, if any of you young ladies are not satisfied with your grades, you can see me after class. I will not misconstrue your motive in remaining."

Prexy—"I hear you ripped some of the fellows for not drilling."

Cap. Converse—"I should say I did. You should have heard me 'Rip' Rarey."

Dr. Bleile (on vaccination)—"The faculty in its wisdom will sit on that question."

G. W. Knight

There is a Professor named Knight,
Whose face and whose form are a fright.
He looks like John Drew,
Smokes cigarettes, too,
But a terrible quizzer is Knight.

Brewster's Lament

When I think on the happy days
I spent wi' you, my dearie;
And now what lands between us lie,
How can I be but eerie!
How slow ye move, ye heavy hours,
As ye were wae and weary;
It was na sae ye glinted by
When I was wi' my dearie,

We are very much gratified to learn that girls can now study architecture at the O. S. U. Below is an outline of the course as found on page 45 of the Catalogue of the College of Agriculture and Domestic Science:

8. Lectures on History of Art and Architecture and Historic Costumes. Second term. Practice work: Making of a lined waist; cutting and fitting of dress skirts. Credit four hours. M., 9 and Tu., W., 1 to 4.

9. Lectures on Historic Art and on the Decoration of the House. Third term. Practice work: Making of a tailored skirt and jacket or of a party wrap or tea gown. Credit four hours. M., 9 and Tu., W., 1 to 4.

"Compendium of Universal Knowledge," by Mr. H. Brugger. Published under auspices of Seminar in Education. Edited by Dr. D. R. Major. In 50 vols. Price ——. Everything from the Creation to the Superintendents' Meeting at Cincinnati. Everything in full; nothing condensed.

First Co-Ed.—"Did you hear that Betty had scarlet fever?"

Second Co-Ed.—"Oh, that's nothing. Betty always has the Scarlett fever."

"A Literary Courtship"—"Teddy" Smith and Miss Jones in the Library."

"The Unsolved Mystery"—The class in aesthetics.

A Freshman came—and in his fate
Take warning, gentle reader,
His sole ambition was to be
In everything a leader.
They made him captain of the mob,
This leader by profession,
And three days afterward he led
A funeral procession.

"No, Percivell, that is not a tramp, that is Professor Lord.

There is a chemist called "Nat,"
With hair like an Angora cat.
He shaved off his beard,
Being afraid
That therein would nest a small rat.

There was a young fellow named Miesse,
Who thought he was smarter than we be;
"Caps and gowns"—they did pass,
He was squelched by the class;
"Requiescat in pace—his Miesse."

There is a beer brewed by Hoster,—
Of course you've all run across (t)'er.
But this brew isn't in it
With Cassandra's a minute.
What a shame it would be if he lost her!

Committee on Information—"First of all you must be matriculated."
New Student—"Does it hurt much?"

Farmer Whipp (over Citizens' 'phone)—Hello! is this Mabel? Why, say, Mabel, got anything on tonight? You haven't? Good work! I haven't anything on myself. I'll be right out.

Many Freshman are permanent only temporarily.

First Young Lady—"How were you impressed with Mr. Dickinson?"
Second Young Lady—"I wasn't impress, I was oppressed."

Blinky Arnold (to trigonometry class)—"You musn't monkey with the ankles (angles).

"Were there many Sigma Nus at the Kappa doings?"
"Oh, yes; most all except Irish Connors."

A Freshie had heard much of hazing,
E'er he went off to school in the fall.
What wonder his hair was seen raising
When he heard some one mention "Haze Hall."

And here's to Batch, a gay deceiver he,
As Prof. of French he draws his fee.
And so upon his face we see
The smile that won't come off.

"Why do they have round rooms in the Law Building?"
"So the barristers can't spit in the corners, you it."

Mademoiselle D.—"Now you must remember that all countries of Europe are feminine."

McKittrick—"Is that because they are Mother countries?"

First Student—"What is the biggest joke you ever heard?"
Second Student—"Mr. Miesse."

Doctor Bleile

There is a doctor named Bleile,
Who brings in his jokelet so sly,—
 Be it bacteria, or bugs,
 Or the hygiene of hugs,—
He ne'er to a class-room speaks dryly.

Is it true that Miss Duncan writes "Prexy" Thompson's speeches?
 Where, oh where, are the Chi Phis?
 Have you seen the schedule for the Phi-Kap Baseball League?
 Do you read Mack's University news in the Citizen?
 McMullin, McMullin, wherefore are thou, McMullin?
 Why, oh why, did I pay 50c. to have them move the athletic field?
 Willst not come back, Sue, and break the deep, thick silence once again?
 Will Perry Hale speak in convocation next fall?
 Does Miss Cockins, or Stiver, run the University?
 Is there anyone who realizes that Miss Jones' has the wool pulled over their eyes?
 Has anyone on the faculty got any brains?
 Who first thought of caps and gowns?
 Who hopes that Miesse will come back?
 Is not Dr. McNeal the original Yellow Kid?
 Doesn't Bachelder own the original "smile that won't come off?"
 Wouldn't Joe Taylor make a merry monarch, though?
 Does convocation continue through the third term?
 Does Dr. Hagerty play golf?
 Did Miss Eastman enjoy Ben Hur?
 Why did Kit Vogel leave college?
 How many Betas are there in school?
 Yont—"Adair's in your mandolin club, 'aint he, Shannon?"
 Shannon—"Yes."
 Yont—"You and he are great friends; run together right along?"
 Shannon—"Oh—h—h, yes—but I've got sore feet and can't run very fast."

Dr. Christopher Peaches Linhart, T. W. A. A., surrounded by his apparatus. Dr. Linhart is without doubt the most efficient physical director the University has ever had, he being the first. As may be seen from his photograph, the doctor is the proud possessor of a magnificent physique, his only weakness being in the knees. Dr. Linhart will vaccinate you for ten cents.

An Incident of the Smallpox Scare

One bright morning in February members of history No. 5 met to find an exam. and No Professor Knight. "Called away," explained Mr. Rightmire.

Tongues will wag and murder will out. At the next meeting Prof. G. W. K. assumed his most dignified air, cleared his throat and spoke thusly:

"I am very glad to be able to say that I am not in quarantine—a very silly rumor started by one of the very young women in my class. I know exactly who started it." Rapt silence and cunning little shivers creeping up the girls' back followed.

Later in the gab-room the rapt silence was broken, history 5 girls gathered together are talking excitedly:

Miss Pratt—"Gracious, goodness alive, girls, I'm pilfered, simply pilfered. Did you see his eagle eyes fastened on me when he said he knew the very person? The very idea! I didn't know a thing about it till, till—oh, yes, Ruth Davidson told me out in the hall. Ruth, you told me."

Miss Davidson—"Well, mercy, mercy; I would never have dreamt of such a thing if Kath hadn't told me. Kath, you remember you told me, at ten you told me."

Miss Eastman—"Yes, of course I told you, but, la, la, Martha Sproat told me. Martha, you told me and told me it was true, too."

Miss Sproat (rather triumphantly)—"Well, Professor Bohannon told me early this morning, and I don't see why the girls are getting blamed for it."

Miss Arnold (who had not been at class, suddenly joining the group)—"Girls, tell me, I hear Prof. Knight said in class that I started that quarantine story about him."

Girls (in a delighted chorus)—"Yes, Louise, he did, yes indeed."

Miss Davidson (giving the finishing touch)—"He said he was very sorry to have to mention names and was more than surprised at the young lady who—"

Miss Arnold—"Well, well, that is certainly rich (tough, she meant). I shall go right in and tell him a few. Of all things—saying that I—well, well—and I didn't know a blessed thing about it. Wouldn't you go, girls?"

Girls—"Yes, yes indeed, Louise."

Miss Arnold departing to brace herself for the struggle, the other girls sit down to their lunches. Soon Miss Eastman, her mind on her history paper, remarks across the chairs to Miss Sproat: "Where is Siebert's 'Underground Railway' in the Library, Martha?"

Miss Loechler (who had caught snatches of the whole conversation, now had a brilliant thought and screamed)—"My heavens, did Prof. Knight use Siebert's Underground Railway to escape his quarantine?"

Then all bedlam broke loose and in between whiles Miss Loechler was heard to mutter: "Well, I don't care, there is some kind of an underground passage leading to the Library, and anyway, Kath Eastman never talks straight."

Correspondence

(The Makio will be glad to answer your questions, if possible. But if we cannot reply to them, you may be sure no one else can.)

Elsa L.—Yes, if you remind the editors sufficiently, Brother and Cassie will be remembered in the Makio. Such sisterly devotion is very commendable.

Richardson—No, you are mistaken. It is not good form to wear a Tuxedo to class. Still, much can be condoned in a man of your remarkable temperament.

Florence Welling—Your idea is certainly a good one. But "Platonic friendship" has become so commonplace. Can't you devise something more original?

Mary Leonard—No, we wouldn't advise you to model your voice after hers. One, such as that, is quite sufficient for any gab-room. Her "recitation" voice isn't so bad, however.

Batchelder—You are quite right. A sunny smile is always to be desired.

Will Scarlett—Her father does seem unreasonable, I will admit. Still, if it comes to a choice between her and your frat, let your heart decide.

Louise Arnold—Yes, birds are interesting, but not to all people.

Egbert Mack—You have our sympathies. But the political life is full of disappointment. Remember "Honest John."

Clara Postle—No, the jugular vein is not located as you imagine it. Consult Dr. Bleile.

Dr. Hagerty—We recommend Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It will subdue the most obstreperous infants. Thank you for your kind wishes. We should be very glad to visit your kindergarten, if time permitted.

Kenyon Hayden—Undoubtedly you have the heaviest work in college. You are quite right in telling every one about it. Be sure to keep your fraternity sisters informed upon it, that's what they are for.

Harry Birnie—We cannot answer your question. Why don't you ask the young lady herself? You will have to do it, eventually, you know.

Vernon Ward—Yes, it is quite proper to sign yourself "Major Ward." Of what use is a title unless you utilize it?

There are two brothers Cornell,
About one of whom you can't tell;
But be sure of this,
Fred's slated for bliss,
While "Brownie" will go to—heaven, also.

Carl Booth visits the Monnet Hall girls after the Delaware football game.

The Girls (interested)—“Say, Carl, is there any truth in the report that your company was going to throw you into the lake one night last week?”

Carl (the popular pet)—“Yes, and I’ll tell you how it was. You see our University is attended largely by crazy Ags, farmers, rubes, and bum vets, and when a man attains great popularity he becomes the object of their malice, and they attempt to reek their vengeance upon him by throwing him into the lake. (So saying our hero confidently displayed his intelligent front teeth.)

An Hour With Hagerty

1:05 p. m.—Mr. Malone, Mr. Medberry and Mr. McClelland roost in various graceful poses on the backs of the chairs in the seminary room and read the papers.

Miss Early unexpectedly drops in, followed by a rush of wind, and Miss Sheets whizzes in.

1:07 p. m.—The “three red-heads” saunter aimlessly in.

1:08 p. m.—Frightful noises heard outside the door, followed by shrieks of laughter.

Enter: Prattie and Rita subduing their unseemly mirth with the aid of half a dozen handkerchiefs.

1:09 p. m.—Dr. Hagerty makes his appearance on the scene and operations begin.

1:10 p. m.—Miss Huntington swishes in.

1:12 p. m.—The door slowly opens and a Cheshire cat-grin squeezes through, bringing with it Miss Thompson.

1:12½ p. m.—Again the door squeaks and “Billy” appears, trying to look as if he had run all the way from the car. Meanwhile the rest of the “individuals” have wended their way to their seats.

Dr. Hagerty—“Mr. Medberry, what are the essential features of a woman’s hat?”

Mr. M.—“The price.”

The class subsides and pursues the even tenor of its way for ten minutes.

Dr. H.—“Miss Thompson, what are the physical ‘characteristics’ of the negro?”

Miss T.—“Y—y—y. They have a black skin and big feet and black eyes and—”

Dr. H.—“Do all of them have black eyes? Don’t some of them have blue eyes?”

Miss T.—“Why, yes—s—s; when they aren’t negroes.”

Dr. H.—“Mr. Scarlett, what is your opinion on this subject?”

Mr. S. (waking from a three minutes’ nap)—“I—I—I beg pardon, what was the question?”

Dr. H.—“What is your opinion—do you agree with Miss Thompson concerning—”

Mr. S. (a light breaking over his face)—“Why, why, yes; yes, I agree with Miss Thompson.”

At this juncture Dr. Hagerty announces that he will continue the discussion, and the class relapses into a semi-comatose state, produced by a combination of too much lunch, hot weather and a half hour lecture on “The Races of Men.”

J. H. Warner

There is a reuben named Warner,
Who on Y. M. C. A. has a corner.
Its influence he bent
To be Naught Three's president,
And the Senior Prom's chiefest adorning.

1. Happy is the Freshman's lot at O. S. U.
For him the whole world has a rosy hue.
As he lounges on the grass,
While the glad hours swiftly pass,
We would wish his cares might ever be so few.
2. Great's th' importance of the Soph. at O. S. U.;
We may not believe it, but he vows 'tis true.
He is ne'er without a book,
He affects a learned look;
Oh, that half he thinks he knows he really knew.
3. Many are the Juniors' trials at O. S. U.;
"Did mortal e'er before have so much work to do?"
No more loafing for him now,
There are furrows on his brow,
Of the Sophomores' airs he takes a contemptuous view.
4. The Senior's heart is glad at O. S. U.,
But there's bitter in the sweet always, too.
Soon his troubles will be done,
Then he'll wish they'd just begun,
And many a day he'll yearn for O. S. U.

Miss Haesler (to Prof. Mesloh)—"I intend to do better next time."

Prof. Mesloh—" 'Good intentions pave the way to hell,' Miss Haeseler."

Dr. Haines—"Mr. Gardener, will you please describe the fourth ventricle of the brain?"

Mr. Gardener (after five minutes' thought)—"Wy—y—I'm especially interested in the third ventricle."

Billy Graves—"What does the name Lamb suggest to you, Miss Ball?"

Miss Ball (absent-mindedly)—"Mint sauce."

There is a class in French confab,
Where there's much parley-vous.
It's hard on Benny Bowen's nerves,
He thinks they all sont fous.
They think they've a hope of learning French.
Well, maybe, au dessus;
But on this earth I do maintain
They'll do it pas de tout.

Egbert Mack

There is a Phi Psi named Mack,
Who imagines he's the whole pack.
His pa's a trustee
And the profs glad will be
When he leaves no more to come back.

An Hour With Batchelder

The class saunters leisurely in. Batchelder sits in serene silence, wearing "the smile that won't come off." At last, he proceeds to call the roll, when he reaches Guitard's name there is no response.

"Where's our friend, Guitard? I believe he has dropped this work."

Miss Sackett, Miss Nichols and Miss Jackson (in chorus)—"I hope so!"

"Steady now, steady. Mr. Prendergast, why were you absent yesterday?"

Mr. Prendergast—"Why, I thought it was White's turn to come."

At this critical juncture White appears. Batchelder says: "Ah!!!" and grins like a Cheshire. "Now," he says benevolently, "I am going to dictate some sentences. All ready. We're off:

"He was president, but he is working now.

"He threw the orange because she smiled. (These sentences have an unconscious humor of their own.)

"I would make more if I said less.

"I will show—show—" he pauses at loss for a word. Prendergast suggests, "Show down."

Batchelder—"We will omit the rest of the sentences and go to the translation. Mr. Hamilton, will you kindly break forth into song."

Hamilton blushes confusedly, and falls over his feet in rising. He finally adjusts them to his satisfaction and the relief of the young ladies on the front row, and "breaks forth."

Batchelder—"Mr. Prendergast may favor us next."

Mr. Prendergast—"I've lost the place."

Batchelder—"Well, here's hoping you will find it by the time I get around to you again. Fuller, it's up to you."

Fuller (translating)—"He was dying of—I don't know what that next word is. What's 'ventura?'"

Batchelder—"Coe, what was that man dying of?"

Coe (eagerly seizing a chance to distinguish himself)—"Windows."

Batchelder nearly has apoplexy and the class roars.

Prendergast—"I've found the place now."

Bell rings.

Dr. Hagerty (to the Sociology class)—"Here is a very instructive reference that I want the class to look up. I don't remember the name of the magazine, nor I don't recall the year, nor the month, and the name of the article has quite slipped my memory; but if you find it I am sure you will find it very interesting. (Exit class in wild disorder to hunt for the article.)

Oh, no, Geraldine, that is not Perry Hale, that is just Irish Connors.

Town and Gown

In this age so democratic
There are students so erratic
 As to don a sable cap and gown,
By such differentiation
To secure an elevation
 From the people of the town.

In this seeking for the caste
Of a medieval past
 There's retrogression.
It's not easy to distinguish,
But this spirit's bloody English
 's my impression.

These Seniors do be geese
To cackle without cease
 That they do save expense.
When they coolly count the cost
They'll see that they have lost
 Exactly two hundred-fifty cents.

Oh! from this slavery to be free
And go up for my degree
 In trousers, coat and shirt,
That I could to the Senior prom
And likewise depart therefrom
 Still a man who'd never worn a skirt!

Mr. Mitchell—"If you do not return my pencil I loaned you I will get out an attachment."

Miss Holtermann—"That sounds ambiguous to me."

Mr. Mitchell—"Don't you know that I'm very oracular?"

Miss Holtermann—"Say, is that all of yours that I have?"

Miss Clawson—"Say, Mr. Wheeler, how do you make love?"

Mr. Wheeler—"Take 10 c.c. of palpitation of the heart, put in a few drops of blushes for indicator, titrate with one-tenth normal solution of loss of sleep, set in a cool place for one hour, evaporate on a water bath, then weigh as Pure Love."

Dr. Hodgeman—"Miss Walsh, have you never heard that in the bright lexicon of youth there is no such word as 'fail'?"

Miss W.—"Yes, but I have also heard that the lexicographers should be immediately notified of the omission."

Prof. Kellerman (to student of Ag. Botany class, who has been told to look up a certain question and has failed in the undertaking)—"What method of procedure did you follow, Mr. ———, to obtain this information."

Mr. ——— (who has not asked the Prof)—"I asked everybody that I thought knew anything about it."

Prof. Kellerman—"Well, I am sorry, Mr. ———, that you have such a poor appreciation of my abilities along that line."

Elsa Loechler (screeching to the gab-room)—"Gee, girls, I had a thought and—but I can't think of it."

At the Glee Club Concert

"Whose's that man singing bass?"

"You mean Russell Hare?"

"Oh, no, no; I mean that sensible looking fellow."

There is a bad man named Malloy,—
A sort of a hobbledehoy.

His gait and his waddle
Are held as a model
By every true O. S. U. boy.

Lewis was making funny cracks all afternoon, but this was the particular CRACK that everybody laughed at.

To Tipton

Oh, noble youth, with cheeks aflame,
Woe to the frat to which you came!
Bringing wild ideas to the same
Of mounting the ladder of Theta to fame.
Conceit is centered in your brain,
Until now, long dormant lain,
Suddenly wakened it causes pain
To the female hearts you think you've slain.

MORAL.

When little boys come to college
In a search for worldly knowledge,
Here's advice from an honest heart,
That may help them to make a start:
Red cheeks are nice, but best in girls.
As a general thing, they go with curls.
While talk and conceit are not all that's required
To make a Soph by the girls admired.

Ward—Schoedinger Obituary

1. Under the willow, Vern smoked his cigar,
Smoked his cigar, smoked his cigar;
Under the willow, Vern smoked his cigar,
Smoked his cigar.
2. Under the willow, Anna Belle played her guitar,
Played her guitar, played her guitar;
Under the willow, Anna Belle played her guitar,
Played her guitar.
3. Vern told her he loved her, but um-um, he lied,
Um-um, he lied, um-um, he lied;
Vern told her he loved her, but um-um, he lied,
Um-um, he lied.
4. Anna Belle told him she hated him, but um-um, she lied,
Um-um, she lied, um-um, she lied;
Anna Belle told him she hated him, but um-um, she lied,
Um-um, she lied.
5. They were to be married, but um-um, they died,
Um-um, they died, um-um, they died;
They were to be married, but um-um, they died,
Um-um, they died.
6. They both went to um-um, and um-um, they fried,
Um-um, they fried, um-um, they fried;
They went to um-um, and um-um, they fried.
Because they lied.

In speaking of a class that cut Math. 72 one day, Prof. Kuhn was heard to quote that, "Only horses that are fastened to empty wagons run away!"

There is a young Dutchman from Wheeling,
Who sleeps with his feet on the ceiling.
The rats suck his hair
As he lies in his lair
And the skin off his nose keeps a-peeling.

"There shall be no (K)night in heaven."

Sung at the Glee Club Concert

Down in a region all his own
There sits a King upon his throne.
He rules the "lab," and he alone;
He is called Thomas, Professor Thomas.
No matter how well you behave,
No matter how hard you may slave,
He answers with a lordly wave,
As unto you he says, [Chorus]

At O. S. U. you'll find McCord,
When you hear the name you will be bored,
For he flunks you right and left
In trigonometry, in trigonometry,
And every morning he will be
Flunking a class in trig, you see,
Laughing aloud in fiendish glee,
As unto you he says, [Chorus]

At Hayes Hall among the engineers
When Landacre's name a student hears,
He shakes and quakes with many fears
In expectation of a probation,
Should such mishap e'er befall,
Should he below the standard fall.
By request he makes a call,
Landy says to all, [Chorus]

CHORUS:

If you like-a me, like I like-a you,
And we like-a both the same,
I'd like to say, this very day,
I'd like to flunk your name.
For it's nothing to me, as you will agree,
If you are in school or not,
It's too large a school,
And it is our rule,
To try to flunk you out.

Calendar 1902-1903

Dedicated to all ye lovers of "Campus Lab" and makers of "Dates," conducted by Tat L. Tale

Sept. 22—Registration. Large returns from the rural districts. Sigma Nus get Bode Malloy in College. All Greeks out with field glasses.

Sept. 23—More registration. Miss Cockins in desperation asks the assistance of all $K A \theta$, active and alumnae.

Sept. 24—Professors endeavor to run opposition to the "Campus Lab" by conducting classes. Phi Gams rescue Malloy from ΣN and attempt to have him get chummy with Carpenter. $K K I'$ corrals all desirable Freshman girls for the day.

Sept. 25—Malloy pledged to $B \theta II$. Y. M. C. A. reception in the Armory.

Sept. 26— $K K I'$ entertains with a spread. Miss Deatruck among the guests. Elsa Loechler announces that "brother has gone Beta." Betas entertain Freshman class with a smoker.

Sept. 27—Football: O. S. U. 6, Otterbein 0. "So much money" spent up at Ruggles Beach.

Sept. 29—Laura Deatruck lunches with the Pi Phis. Theresa Erb appears with a $K \Sigma$ pin.

Sept. 30—Miss Deatruck with $K K I'$ again.

Oct. 1—Miss Deatruck decides to board permanently with $II B \phi$.

Oct. 3—Freshman-Sophomore cane rush. General opportunity to settle old scores. Sophs victorious. "Snake eaters" do a little hazing. Literary societies try to show the Freshmen the "Delights of Debate."

Oct. 4— $K A \theta$ and $\phi \Delta \theta$ initiate. Sophs decorate the campus.

Oct. 7—Senior class election. Greeks vs. Barbs. "Sad is the tale thereof." $B \theta II$ decides to take only half of the Freshman class.

Oct. 9—Y. M. C. A.-Y. W. C. A. reception in the Armory.

Oct. 10—Gertrude and Hovey begin a seminary in campus work.

Oct. 11— $B \theta II$ initiates all the brothers. Many others and George Bel-lows.

Oct. 13—Election of Makio Board. The literary societies decide to let the fraternities assist in the publication of the book.

Oct. 18—Pi Beta Phi initiation.

Oct. 21—First meeting of the English Club. Mr. Mack announces that he will be unable to write more than four major papers during the year. Rumored that Mary Taylor cut a class.

Oct. 25—Michigan plays football. O. S. U. interested spectators. Score? No record. Prof. Thomas and Captain Cope lose large sums of money. One always finds thieves in a large crowd.

Oct. 27—Daniels has the consideration to tell Malone that it is getting warmer as he hangs up the coat.

Oct. 31—Thetas introduce their new girls with a reception. Mr. Dickinson is too anxious to meet them to wait for such formality as an invitation.

Nov. 1—Kenyon-O. S. U. game. Betas entertain their Kenyon brothers with a dance. Jackson wears his O in front again. Hard luck, Pidge.

Nov. 3—Cassandra and Brew admitted to the Jackson Van Tine Seminary.
